AGRICULTURAL AND FASHION SHOW A WONDERFUL SUCCESS

Remarkable Exposition of Local Products and Merchandise

HUNDREDS VIEW THE DISPLAY

Almost two thousand people attended the agricultural and fashion show at Turner Hall, Thursday afternoon and evening. This number would have been much larger but for bad weather, although as it was there were many who at times found it difficult to gain admission during the evening.

That the exposition is an unqualified success is the unanimous verdict of all who attended the exhibition and the managers expect the attendande this evening will largely exceed the figures of Thursday evening. To properly appreciate the display it must be seen by the visitor and there is plenty to occupy their attention every minute they remain in the building

At the entrance, in the vestibule the Douglas Business College has a fine display in charge of pupils of the school, and who also make an enumeration of the attendance On Thursday they recorded 1823 visiters

In the dining room of the building are fine displays of furniture as well as talking machines and musical instruments, by Woodward Furniture Company and H. Porter, and a furniture display by the Zeidman Furniture company

In the adjoining billiard room is found displays by the Southern Furniture company, the Stroud-Michael company showing sewing machines, electric washing machines and sweepers, and in addition a fine display of comforts and quilts made by individual exhibitorss

A feature of the display in this room is some wood carving, shown by Anthony Pallagren It is a series of engravings of our three martyred Presidents, Abraham Lincoln. James A. Garfield and William McKinley The work is finely done, and is attracting a great deal of attention. In the main room Mr. Pallagren has a display of wooden watchchains made from matches.

Immediately adjoining is the Miller Fashion Store, showing a number of late creations in women's wear in suits, waists and hats.

To the right of the door on entering the main exhibition hall is found J. E. Masters with a fine display of groceries.

In regular order then follows Regan & Hormell, with electrical washers, irons and other goods of a similar nature;

Wayne's Quality Store, in ladies' coats and waists, a double booth well arranged;

Sam Haas, a fine display of men's and women's shoes;

The Kinder Floral Company, with fine selection of flowers;

J. W. Berryman & Son, dry goods; a display of suits, coats and hats, well displayed;

Grant's Hardware store, in aluminum and other kitchen and dining room ware, nicely arranged and well displayed;

Collins Department Store with a display of men's and women's clothing, neatly arranged;

The Sugar Bowl, with plenty of sweets;

The Leith Electric company, showing electric washers and irons.

This completed the list of booths, all of which were arranged by local merchants and all of which were the centers of attraction during the evening.

In addition to the display of merchandise and furnishings the exhibition of fancy work and quilts was much beyond the expectation of the managers. The work is exquisitely done, and shows the greatest skill on the part of those who fashioned the various designs offered for exhibition. Those who have one or more pieces on exhibition are:

Two Popular Employes Advanced by Steel Products Co.

Two well known and popular employes at the Monessen plant of the Pittsburgh Steel Products company have come into their own in the line of promotion recently, and now each is holding a more responsible position. They are J. D. Case, of North Belle Vernon, who has been made assistant superintendent, J. H. Dunbar of Monessen being the superintendent and W. C. Sutherland of Charleroi general superintendent of both the Monessen and Allenport plants of the company, and Sidney Watkins, of Tenth street, Monessen, who has been made chief clerk of the Monessen plant, vice J. D. Case, promoted.

For five or six years Mr. Case has been the patient and untiring chief clerk at the steel products plant, having gone with the company in 1910. Mr. Watkins has been in the employ of the company fully as long in the position of secretary to the superintendent, each having worked tirelessly and now receives his reward in the way of promotion and change of work.

The Pittsburg Steel Products company always has been among the foremost local industrial plants in its consideration of the men, their comforts and conveniences, as well as the conditions under which they toil. These two men particularly had much to do with carrying out the policies and instructions of the directors and officials along these lines. They are considered especially well trained and equipped for their more advanced industrial work.

DISASTROUS WRECK AT BROWNSVILLE

What is considered the most disastrous wreck in the history of the Monongahela Railway occurred at 4:40 this morning in the yard at Brownsville, just below the passenger station. A train of loaded gondola cars broke away from Simpson mine on the Dunlap creek division at the hour named above, and coming out on to the main line, near the Brownsville station, sideswiped moving freight train. In the impact which followed nineteen of the coal cars were completely wrecked and four cars from the moving freight train. Traffic on the main line was completely tied up, and had it not been that an empty track was left open on the Dunlap creek division there would have been no traffic south of Brownsville today. As it is trains are getting out of and into Brownsville by way of the Dunlap creek routed to Republic and by way of the Junction. Wreck trains from the Monongahela Division, Monongahela Railway and P. & L. E. are at work and hope to have the debris cleared away by late this evening. The loss is estimated at $250.000.

PLANS FOR ROAD BUILDING PROGRAM

One of the largest road building programs in the history of Allegheny county, involving an expenditure of $10,500,000 and adding more than 130 miles to the improved roads, was given consideration by the commissioners of that county on Thursday, with a view of having the program completed and ready for submission to the people of the county at the coming election in November in the form of a bond issue.

The building program provides for the improvement and extension of several main highways, and all will be of concrete construction. Of somewhat local interest is the fact that the commissioners have given tentative approval to the improvement of the boulevard between Munhall and Duquesne, following the line of the Pittsburg Railways company between these two towns.

A Big Feature

A feature of the Fashion Show held at the Turner Hall last evening, to receive special mention was the display of Coats, Dresses and Suits by Wayne's Quality Store.

All garments shown were selected from stock by Mrs. Phillip Wayne and fitted by Mrs. Grace Johnson.

The models for the big store were Miss Lillian Dunham, Miss Alice Motts, Miss Jeannette Rosenbloom, and are worthy of much praise. 82-t1*

EXHIBITION FLIGHTS BY AN AIR PLANE AT DONORA

Aviation Field on the Rabe Farm from Where Flights Will Be Made

PASSENGERS WILL BE CARRIED

Donora citizens expect to be "up in the air" not only figuratively but literally, a number of times within the next few weeks, and experience the thrills that come from viewing the earth's surface from a high altitude.

A Curtiss model J. P. Biplane was expected to arrive in that town either Thursday evening or Friday morning, for the purpose of staging exhibition flights during the next ten days or so, and to carry passengers over this section of the valley daily.

The plane is being brought to the Monongahela valley by the Smith-Lewis-Andrews company of Buffalo, N. Y., and the long flight was made from the lake city to the valley yesterday. It was scheduled to arrive late in the afternoon, and to alight on the William Rabe farm, a mile or so back of Donora, where the plane will be located during its stay, and from where flights will be made every day. The pilot of the plane, which is a new one, is Lieut. John Andrews, formerly of the United States Air Service, who trained in Texas, and who had six months practical flying service in France. Mr. Fred Smith, of the airplane firm, came to Donora in advance of the plane to make the necessary arrangements for its arrival, and the location of an aviation field.

The plane is scheduled to remain in the Donora section for at least two weeks, and while there it is expected that it will be utilized by a large number of local residents with a flight among the clouds. The element of danger has been reduced to the minimum, and only straight flying will be attempted with passengers, although the pilot may put on a few extra stunts in exhibition flying, such as the Immelman Turns, Nose Dive, Tail Spins, Loops and so on for the benefit of the assembly.

Already quite a number of prominent Donora citizens have expressed a desire to take flights, and no doubt their ambitions will be satisfied before the plane leaves for other localities.

ATTENDS REUNION OF VETERANS AT PITTSBURG

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Wise, of Washington avenue, were in Pittsburgh on Thursday, attending the reunion and banquet of veterans of the civil war, at Memorial Hall. Mr. Wise met a number of old friends who were his comrades during the war. A spade which was used in the building of Ft. Mechanic, 19th ward, Pittsburgh, was turned over to the Memorial Association by Mr. Wise. This fort was built and defended Pittsburg during the civil war.

WIKSTROM WRITES TO LOCAL FRIENDS

Malcolm Wickstrom for a number of years general superintendent of the Pittsburgh Steel Products company, has been heard from in his native land, where he went early this year from the local plant. He reports all well and writes some interesting information on a picture postal card containing a scene of graves where the dead of many nationalities were buried after a great sea battle just off Juttland.

He says hundreds of bodies of English and German sailors floated ashore on the Swedish islands on the west coast. The islanders buried them, and this picture is one of the many graves one finds. On one island there are twelve Englishmen and twelve Germans buried in one and the same grave. The verse on the tombstone is very appropriate.

One fisherman got twelve of the bodies in his net, a ghoulish catch. Mr. Wickstrom promises a letter later

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS HOLDS PLEASANT MEETING

The Isabella Thoburn Class of the M. E. church was entertained at the home of Miss Margaret Wilson of Wise's Plan, Maple Creek, Thursday evening. On account of the inclemency of the weather, the attendance was not as large as expected.

The business of the class was transacted and great enthusiasm shown. The president Miss Mattie Kelly, brought before the class a number of important transactions to be decided upon. The most important of these a contest, which was eagerly accepted by all the girls. The meeting then adjourned, after which a dainty lunch was served by the hostess. The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Roland Gass, of Washington Avenue.

I will collect that rent, positively in advance and guarantee no vacancies. Clyde B. Cope, Real Estate and Insurance, 315 McKean avenue. 21-tf*

SLIGHT CHANGE IN EXHIBITION PROGRAM

Miss Ethel Barth will be heard in two soprano solos at the Fashion Show and Agricultural Display, this afternoon at Turner Hall. This evening C. Warren Kinder will sing two tener solos, and Miss Edith Jenkins will entertain with a violin solo. It has been decided by the management to exclude children from the exhibit after six o'clock, this evening, in order to permit older persons to witness the exhibit.

LINKS WITH HISTORIC PAST

Interesting to Trace the Names of Streets and Lanes in City of Boston Today.

The names of the streets and lanes of Boston are closely linked with the historic past. Others there are which could be connected with Boston only, such as Tremont street, a corruption of "Tri-mountain," by which name Boston was known to the early settlers on account of the three high hills that serve as a background to the peninsula. This replaced the name "Shawmut," given to it by the Indians. Mary Harred Northend writes in the Century Magazine that the streets of this quaint city in the East were laid out by straying cattle.

After the Revolution the names of many Boston streets were changed. Queen street became Court street, and King street the State street of today. School street took its name from a school that was erected there. Dark alleys, leading off the principal streets on every side, were named after footways, usually depending on where they led to. Creek lane originally led to the old creek. It was in tavern days that this was the center of stagecoach life. The old custom house once stood on this street. Corn court took its name from the fact that the corn market was at one time situated there. Sumner street was once know as "Seven Star Lane." It is now one of Boston's busiest streets.

LIVED LONG ON FRUGAL DIET

Englishman Who Died in 1680 Proved That It Was Possible to Eke Out Existence Cheaply.

Thomas F. Curby, the champion eater of Massachusetts, declared that dyspepsia is the result of eating too little, and not too much. His Sunday dinner consisted of thirteen lobsters, sixty eggs, and one hundred oysters. At the other end of the scale must be placed old Roger Crab, the first vegetarian, who died September 11, 1680, after proving that a man could live on 72 cents a year. Originally a haberdasher in a big way of business at Chesham, England, a free liver and drinker of strong ales, he "got religion"—also dyspepsia—in middle life, sold his stock, gave the proceeds to the poor, and took to living in a hut on three-farthings a week. Instead of "strong drinks and wines," he says in his autobiography, "I give the 'old man'—he lived two centuries too soon to call it "Little Mary"—"a cup of water; and, instead of roast mutton, rabbit with bran, and pudding made with bran and turnip-leaves chopped together." And on this diet he lived to a ripe old age, surviving repeated cudgelings and imprisonment for witchcraft.

Moths Take Big Chances.

The high-flying species of morpho which inhabit the mountainous districts of western America, are much easier captured than those which frequent the plains, though their capture is often attended with difficulty and danger, says the American Forestry Magazine of Washington. One naturalist hunting moths and butterflies in Bogota, fell over a precipice and broke his arm, and then found that he had three days' journey to make on horseback before he could meet with a doctor to set it. Another naturalist, who was collecting in Bolivia found that morpho godartii, Guer., a beautiful species, of a rather light blue which was previously almost unknown to entomologists, frequented an inaccessible ledge in the mountains; he was obliged to have himself lowered by ropes over the precipice before he could obtain it.

Franklin's Court Harmonica.

One of the first musical instruments made by an American was a mouth harmonica, made by Benjamin Franklin at the time when he was minister at the court of Louis in France, where he played it with considerable skill before Marie Antoinette and her court ladies.

The queen was so delighted and interested that Franklin presented the little instrument to her. After Marie Antoinette was beheaded in the great French revolution, this mouth harmonica had many sensational experiences till finally it came into the possession of a wealthy musical amateur and collector in this country, who has it, I believe, to this day.—Musical America.

Study of the relation between the total length of life and the time required to reach maturity has brought out an interesting comparison between men and horses. A horse at five years old is said to be, comparatively, as old as a man at twenty, and doubtless may be expected to behave, according to equine standards, after the manner of the average college student following human standards. A ten-year-old horse resembles, so far as age and experience go, a man of forty, while a horse that has attained the ripe age of thirty-five is comparable with a man of ninety.—New York Evening Post.

About the Same.

"My father occupied the chair of applied physics at Cambridge."

"Dat's nuttin': mine occupied the seat of applied electricity at Sing Sing."—Massachusetts Tech. Voo Doo.

Chorus Girl—What am I to do in the new revue?

America Uses 700 Billion Matches.

Few realize the immense labor, capital and material used to produce matches. Thousands of men are employed, millions of dollars invested and vast forests cut down to meet the demand in America of 700 billion matches a year. One plant alone on the Pacific coast covers 240 acres and uses two hundred thousand feet of sugar pine and yellow pine logs in a day. The odds and ends will not do. A constant search is in progress for large forests of perfect trees to meet the future needs.—P. H. Cheley in "Stories for Boys to Boys."

Quotation About Ballads.

Andrew Fletcher of Saltoun, Scotland, who lived from 1653 to 1716, wrote in a letter to the marquis of Montrose [illegible] in 1704 as follows: "I knew a very wise man so much of Sir Christopher's sentiment that he believed if a man were permitted to make all the ballads he need not care who should make the laws of a nation." This was part of an imaginary conversation concerning a "right regulation of governments for the common good of mankind."

Sell Historic Banner in London.

At a sale of antiques recently in London, colors carried at the battle of Culloden in 1746 were sold to a Glasgow purchaser for £750 ($3,750). The colors were borne by Sir James Kinloch's battalion—the Second—of Lord Ogilvy's regiment, and is believed to be the only banner carried off by the young pretender's defeated army. All the colors taken in the battle were sent to Edinburgh.—London Times.

Signs of Weather Changes.

If a horse is lively without apparent cause, it is a sure sign of cold weather in the near future. But if he stretches out his neck and sniffs it is a sign of rain. If a cat sneezes or sits with its back to the fire it will rain. If she washes her face during a frost it will soon thaw. If she scratches the wall or the leg of a table vigorously the wind will be very high. If asses bray it is another sign of rain.

Goodness.

The world is not suffering for new ideas so much as for the brave and faithful living of some very old ideas. Truth, justice, honor, and unselfishness are not new, but they are all too rare in our common daily intercourse. We can better do without genius than without goodness. The cultivated heart is better.

Same Old World.

Many of us are apt to consider our doll-sized quarters for full-grown people as among purely modern inconveniences; yet nearly a century ago Lord Harvey described Burlington house at Cheswick as "Too small to live in and too large to hang on one's watch chain."—Boston Transcript.

The Older Word Preferable.

Reporting a fire the other day a New York paper said: "A shirt in the wind prevented the entire plant from being destroyed." As "shirt" and the word intended are both defined in the dictionary as "an undergarment for the body," the error wasn't such a bad one. —Boston Transcript.

Enemies Died Together.

A rural postman in Inverness found two animals caught in one trap: one a rabbit, held firmly by a hind leg, and the other a ferret, with both forelegs caught in the trap. Apparently the rabbit was being pursued by the ferret when both were caught.

The way to reform men is not by taking away their pleasures and their happiness, but by dealing with them in a spirit of Christian charity and honorable justice and giving them more happiness.—St. Pierre.

Joyous Fire Drill.

The managers of a babies' home in Portland, Ore., have made fire drills a real delight for the children by installing a zinc-lined chute reaching from the second story to the ground.

Webster's Precocity.

Webster was in college at fifteen, gave earnest of his great future before he was twenty-five, and at thirty was the peer of the ablest men in congress.

A quart of good milk equals in food value ten eggs, almost a pound of lean beef, two pounds of chicken, or nearly half a pound of cheese.

To Force Plants.

A European florist has found that plants can be forced by immersing their leaves and branches in hot water while the earth is kept dry.

Freedom and Despotism.

In a free country there is much clamor, with little suffering; in a despotic state there is little complaint, but much suffering.—Cornot.

POINTS ALWAYS TO NORTH

The lodestone is considered the most wonderful stone in the world, but it is really not a stone at all, but rightly belongs to the mineral family. If it is suspended by a silken thread or floated on mercury, or on a circular raft in water, the same end of the stone will always point to the "Lodestar," or North star; that fact is where it got its name.

The lodestone is a natural compass, such as the Vikings of old used to make centuries before America was discovered. By rubbing a needle or thin steel bar on a lodestone it becomes magnetized, and will float on water and always point to the north.

The most powerful lodestones come from Sweden, and hunters tell stories of not being able to pick up their guns from the ground after laying them near lodestones.

Galileo's original lodestone, with which he made so many experiments, weighs only six ounces, yet it is 300 years old and holds as firmly now as it ever did. It is exhibited in the museum of the Pisan Physics Society. The iron weight at the bottom is made in the form of a sepulchre, probably suggested by the legend that Mahomet's coffin was supported in midair by lodestones.

PRIMITIVE SOUTH SEA CHART

A sea chart of the South Sea islands made of sticks, which served as an accurate and authoritative guide for the daring navigators of the Marshall islands just as modern maps do, is one of the exhibits to be seen in the South Sea Island hall of the American Museum of Natural History in New York. The strange sea chart is the gift of Robert Louis Stevenson, who lived on the island of Samoa four years before his death.

Distances between the islands were measured by hours, not miles. These charts are but little used now, but there was a time when each young chief was compelled to pass his examination in the charts, knowing them by heart, as they never were taken to sea. Some students say the sticks represent currents, as there are four distinct sets of swells from four quarters of the seas at various seasons of navigation, which were closely studied by the natives.

The Dickcissel.

The dickcissel is a small migratory bird, about six and one-fourth inches long, the male beautifully blended with yellow, white and gray, and with a black throat patch and brown shoulders. The female is duller. These birds are very numerous in the middle portions of the United States, frequenting dry, bushy fields or prairies. The dickcissel is a persistent songster, although its song is weak and has little melody. In July and August, when many birds are silent, dickcissels continue their plaintive chant, even on the most sultry days. Their chanting is a simple "chip, chip, che-che-chee." They build their nests of weeds, grasses rootlets, corn husks and the like. They build on the ground, in bushes and thistles, and sometimes in trees. The eggs of the dickcissel are four or five in number. They are a plain, bluish white, hardly distinguishable from those of the bluebird.

Beads in the Levant.

Beads are more necessary than bread to the Levantine. Men, women and children wear and carry beads to ward off ill luck. Even the horses and donkeys have strands of beads about their necks "to baffle the evil eye" and the long horns of the work oxen are decorated with blue and white beads to keep them from falling prey to disease.

In Athens, Constantinople, Tiflis, Smyrna and other cities of the Levant men of all classes carry short strands of fidget beads which they play with while walking in the street, riding in street cars and trains, just as nervous men in the West finger their watch chains. Bead shops abound everywhere in the larger cities and general stores and market stalls sell them in the smaller places. Peddlers hawk them in the streets everywhere.

Old wallpaper will often look like new if a new border is put at the top of the room. This will change the color scheme also if desired. If one of the adjustable cut-out borders is used the average person can put it on. If a paperhanger is employed a saving is made by cutting out the border one's self, thus saving the paperhanger's time. A good sticking paste for heavy papers can be made of eight parts of rye flour to one part water, adding three more parts of boiling water and a little powdered resin. It pays to patch a soiled or torn bit of wallpaper, as a neat patch is not noticeable.

Lucky Woman.

Mrs. Lissen—What's the reason for all the envy?

THE FASHIO SHOW

The agricultural and fashion show now being held at Turner Hall is an exposition of such great value that it is impossible at this time to tell its real value to the community and the public at large. The heartiness with which individual exhibitors have gone into the undertaking and the untiring energy of those members of the Board of Trade who have been instrumental in promoting the enterprise are features which deserve the highest praise on the part of our people.

The undertaking is altogether a matter of love for the community; no ulterior purpose is being served; it is the promotion of an enterprise that serves to bring the people of the locality together and moreover it is an exhibition of what people individually and collectively, can do. The prizes given the winnerss, and the cards of merit presented to all exhibitors do not pay in a financial way, because it would require many dollars to make an adequate return for the time and money and energy expended on the efforts which have been made in order that the undertaking shall be successful. The exhibitors find returns in the satisfaction expressed by visitors. The people of the community owe much to the Board of Trade and to exhibitors for the interest taken, and we should have more such enterprises They are splendid undertakings.

"THE BEST MAN."

Just as the admission to nearly enfranchised women, we suspect, would be received by many of the new voters with little enthusiasm. We know that these, having surveyed the political scene, are convinced of the natural depravity of masculine rulers and perhaps justly are contemptuous of any thing which flows from so dubious a source, says the Chicago Tribune.

But it may be permitted as to the suggestion made by a woman and a suffragist as to a possible useful aid in guiding women's judgment. She refers to the frequent assertion by women that they will "choose the best man."

This writer, addressing the Weekly Review, gently expresses doubt that woman's intuition, of which we are invited to expect so much, is as reliable in the matter of a candidate's qualities and qualifications as some of her confidential sisters and all admiring masculinity consider it. She cites cases in her own experience in which "the best man" has turned out deplorably second best when put to the test of accomplishment, and she discusses the basis of feminine judgment with a candor we have no disposition to emulate.

In fact, on the esoteric subject of women's intuition we hasten to confess our unchallengeable acceptance. We like to preserve it from the prevailing skepticism of the age as a subject of faith, of which there are so few remaining from the rough waves of unbelief. But we venture to support this woman's hint to woman from an entirely different angle. Let us concede, which she is unwilling to do, that woman's intuition is a faithful and unerring guide to judgment of the personal qualities and qualifications of candidates, that such a one is of gold unalloyed and another of clay. What then? May we not remind her that having decided, say in the case of Mr. Harding and Mr. Cox, that one or the other is "the best man," she has by no means solved her problem or arrived at her destination.

If our national government were an extreme form of autocracy, under which all law and all administration flowed from the will and character of the ruler, then and then only would a search for "the best man" be the whole duty of citizenship.

But powerful as an American President is, and important as the character and intelligence of the incumbent are, there are other agencies of government which must be considered. In many instances, as our history abundantly illustrates, "the best man" may not prove to be the best President, for the reason that the "best man" may represent and be limited by political and other restrictions which reduce his power to accomplish what the citizen seeks. In such case the second choice may be the wiser and more profitable.

Thus the question of party cannot be ignored. We have had of recent years a great deal of shallow talk of defects of party, and a considerable part of our voters rather pride themselves on being free from party ties. But while political parties are continuing agencies of government the history and principles of a candidate's party cannot be wisely or safely ignored. Whatever the superficial reformer or indifferent citizen may say, our parties represent certain consistent and persistent tendencies or forces in American history or American thought and action

If the new voter doubts this let her read or re-read the history of our country, following the course of public events from the days of Hamilton and Jefferson, of Webster and Calhoun, of Lincoln and Douglas, of McKinley and Roosevelt, and Bryan and Wilson.

No voter can vote intelligently in November without determining what bearing this party cleavage has upon the problems now confronting the nation. Our major parties are not alike, although the so-called independent in his short-sightedness contends they are. And the problem, before the new voter as before the old, is not merely or even primarily to decide whether Mr Harding or Mr. Cox is "the best man," but to choose what they represent in political principle and tendency.

RAILROADS NOW STAND ALONE

In the small hours of the morning of September 1 the railroads of the United States came back fully into their own responsibility. The roads went back to private management in March, but Government support, in the form of war lease guarantees, continued until the end of August. The railroads now stand wholly upon their own feet, and in the important matter of the public's attitude, at least, they are in a better position than they have been for a number of years. Previous to 1917 the recent stiff increase in freight and passenger rates would have roused a storm of protest. Now, taught by the experience of Government management, the people understand that, especially in these times of high costs, the railroads must have adequate compensation in order to live and give such service as the country properly needs.

The public submits to the increased costs "railroad hating" has been suspended and the principle of adequate compensation has been put into the national programme of rate regulation in a new or more definite form. But, while the public has acquired a more intelligent comprehension of railroad needs, it is to be hoped that the railroad men themselves have learned a salutary lesson. The railroads in the first place brought public displeasure upon themselves and may do the like again unless their managers take pains to see that the same process is not repeated.

REASON FOR RAISING RAISIN RATE

The report that Australia raised and marketed about ten million dollars worth of raisins during the last crop year calls attention to the fact that for the fiscal year 1920 we imported more than five times the quantity of raisins and other dried grapes that we did during the days under the protective tariff policy. This should be of interest to California. The Wilson-Underwood law, to which the San Francisco platform of the Democratic party reaffirms allegiance, made a 20 per cent cut in the duty on raisins Prior to the passage of that law we were importing around 2,500,000 pounds of raisins annually and by 1914, under this reduced rate, we were importing 4,500,000 pounds During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1920 we imported no less than 13,897,000 pounds of raisins, but just what percentage came from Australia has not yet been made public by the Department of Commerce California Republicans are expected to receive this condition in November.

Mr Upham, treasurer of the Republican National Committee, says it must realize 70 per cent of the financial quotas assigned to the various states for campaign purposes that it may be in luck And this is no doubt the truth. It costs money to run campaigns, and the Democrats are spending their share.

These are my Stars Now!

EACH of them has personally joined hands with me to fight for the freedom of the screen in (Town).

Big Eastern monied interests have threatened to come into (Town) and buy a theatre or build one, in which to give you trust-made pictures. Those interests have tried to persuade these stars—now my partners—to stop their work as independents, as free-acting artists, as makers of big, independent special pictures and go to work for them. The would-be trust finds it too costly to keep pace with the wonderful work of these artists, who reckon neither time, money or effort in making their work the very best in motion pictures.

These stars are determined to continue their work, free from dictation, free from yard-stick regulation, free from time-clock limitations on the expressions of their genius, free to spend whatever money is needed to make their pictures the best you will find wherever you go.

They stand irrevocably for the freedom of the screen, for theatres where you can go assured that your motion picture entertainment will be Art, and not spotted with subtle trust-inspired themes, the stories couched in drama and comedy, hiding efforts to win your favor by propaganda for the machinations of other trusts.

To that end they have become my partners to preserve the freedom of the screen in (Town).

Together we are going to give you the finest motion picture entertainment you have ever seen. They are going to make the pictures as independents, as free-acting artists, and I am going to present them exclusively in (Town) as an independent, trust-free, home town theatre owner.

Through Associated First National Pictures, Inc., each of these stars and directors has made a long term contract with me whereby you will see their great masterpieces exclusively at the (Theatre).

My business is here, my interests are here, my theatre is strictly a home town affair. I am free to contract for other great pictures, made by capable independent stars and producers. My field of search for the best in screen entertainment is the world. The only pictures I cannot show you are those made by the trust to present in trust-owned theatres, bought or built with money gambled a thousand miles from here on the chance that you will support them in (Town) instead of your home town, strictly local, absolutely independent theatre.

Future productions made by these artists for Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

COX FOISTS FALSE SPECTER TO FORE IN CAMPAIGN TALK

No One Will Be Deceived by Democratic Attempt to Use Great President's Name.

THE PEOPLE KNEW ROOSEVELT

Death of Foremost American Has Not Dimmed His Deeds in the Minds of Patriots.

By William Hoster

May one who was more or less intimately associated with Theodore Roosevelt in the last fifteen years of his life say a word in regard to the developing tendencies of the pending presidential campaign?

Governor James M. Cox, the Democratic candidate, with increasing frequency is using the name of Colonel Roosevelt in his speeches, as of one from whom the Governor has derived his inspiration for this momentous campaign, and whose support of Mr. Cox's so-called policies would be forthcoming were Roosevelt alive. At least, Governor Cox is at pains to make it appear that it is into his hands that the torch borne by Colonel Roosevelt was entrusted when the latter passed on.

Addressing the Ohio Democratic State Convention at Columbus on August 17th, among other things Governor Cox said:

"Need I remind you that it was in this State that Theodore Roosevelt, that great American, made his speech proclaiming his creed, not that the judges alone should be recalled, but that the judicial procedure itself should be subject to recall."

Acknowledged Error.

First and foremost, no man who knew Theodore Roosevelt well, and was proud to follow his leadership, needs to be told that he lived to realize the error of that specific doctrine which Governor Cox now drags from the political limbo of dead things.

But aside from this, the one outstanding note in Roosevelt's great career was his uncompromising, tried and true Americanism. He was an American above and beyond everything else. His Americanism arose above all party considerations. He was jealous of his country's honor, proud of its traditions, zealous in the maintenance of its integrity and independence. He labored incessantly to promote that national unity which he believed to be one of the safeguards of the Republic; and his faith in Washington's Farewell Address and in the Monroe Doctrine was such that he regarded strict adherence to the injunctions of both as the two great bulwarks of our national existence. If it were necessary to prove these assertions, columns could be quoted from his writings and speeches in support thereof. But one has only to mention the name of Theodore Roosevelt to bring before the mind a picture of a United States strong, self-reliant and independent.

Roosevelt's Position Clear.

One does not have to ponder long to reach a conclusion, therefore, where Roosevelt would stand if happily he were among us today. The man who in 1916 avowed that the supreme national need was the overthrow of Wilsonism and all that Wilsonism represents would have a mighty well-defined position in the fighting today if he were with us, and he would not be ranged on the side of Governor Cox.

The man who, though age was creeping upon him, demanded as his right that he be sent across to face with the two hundred thousand men that clamored to accompany him, the German menace; and who grimly laid down the plea that by his end on the field of battle the drooping morale of the entente forces might be revived, though the death of a former President of the United States would have had little in common with a candidate whose newspapers proclaimed sixteen months after the sinking of the Lusitania, that "The German U-boats have committed no crime against us."

Remember in what stirring words Roosevelt denounced the Lusitania sinking, and how, throughout all that drab period of American neutrality, his powerful voice rang through the land awakening the patriotism of our people to the culmination in April, 1917, when even Mr. Wilson finally was compelled to face the inevitable.

There is no law against Governor Cox's use of Colonel Roosevelt's name. Nor is there any law on the statute books providing for the crimes which are committed in the name of progressiveness for which Colonel Roosevelt stood. There are Napoleons of finance, of wheat, of oil and industry, but there was only one Napoleon. There are Jimmies and Freddies and Harries, but there was only one Teddy.

In the campaign upon which we have entered, the name of Roosevelt will be invoked many times in many places in behalf of many things. But few in all the great army of those who followed Roosevelt will be deceived. They know above all other things that the safety and integrity of the United States lay closest to Theodore Roosevelt's heart, and with them his doctrine of stalwart Americanism will prevail against any preachment of progressiveism which seeks to lure them from the path of patriotic duty.

INTEREST IN OLD MANSES

Traveler Finds Atmosphere of Romance Surrounds Picturesque Abodes of Eastern States.

Vacation pilgrims traveling by automobile or trolley or pursuing the less exhilarating but more tranquil joy of exploring country highways and byways on foot or drawn by some faithful old Dobbin have singled out about every structure or locality famous in song, story and history. Wayside inns, taverns, military headquarters, churches and the birthplaces of celebrities have all come in for their share of worship.

There is, however, one species of landmark which seems to have escaped the special attention of those interested in relics of our pious forefathers—the old manses of New England and the middle states. The rectory or parsonage of today was known in the time of our ancestors by the old Scotch title of manse.

At first thought it might seem that no more particular interest would hover about these ancient manses than about any of the picturesque homes of an earlier century. Indeed it is not so much in outward appearance that they are to be set apart, but because of an intangible atmosphere of sacred romance surrounding them—invisible "clouds of glory" trailing back to the days when the manse played a most important part in the life of the community. Furthermore each of these old ministerial dwellings has a story all of its own. It was by accident I discovered this, and now whenever happy chance takes me to a new locality the first place I hunt up is the manse.—Chicago Daily News.

BUILT IN HONOR OF BUDDHA

Hill Temple of Boro-Budor in Java Is One of the Marvels of the World Today.

The hill temple of Boro-Budor in Java is one of the most gigantic and finest works ever reared by the ancients. It represents more human labor and artistic skill than the great pyramid of Egypt. Said Alfred R. Wallace, the scientist: "The human labor and skill expended on Boro-Budor is so great that that expended on the great pyramid sinks into insignificance."

The temple was built about the seventh century of our era. It stands in Central Java, originally a monument of Buddha. The ashes of Buddha, originally divided into eight parts and buried in eight different places, were disinterred and re-divided into 84,000 parts, which were placed in vases and distributed all over his dominions.

When Buddhist missionaries went to Java in the seventh century they carried with them one of these vases. As a fitting receptacle for the vase, Boro-Budor temple, the finest piece of architecture in the then known world, and one which has never been rivaled since, was erected.

Candles on Toast!

An adult Eskimo is capable of consuming twenty pounds of flesh and oil daily. A Yakut will wash down this quantity of flesh with a quart or two of train-oil, and take as dessert a dozen tallow candles.

A famous naturalist, who cooked part of a boaconstrictor, declared that it tasted very much like veal. On another occasion he tested crocodile and pronounced the flesh excellent.

Frobisher and Settle both commented on the way the inhabitants around Hudson's Bay used to eat grass. "Such grass," says Settle, "as the country produceth, they pluck up and eat, not daintily or salad-wise, but like brute beasts."

Humboldt tells of men living on the banks of the Orinoco who eat earth. They knead the earth into balls of from four to six inches in diameter, and bake them before a slow fire.

"Piazzas" I have written throughout, and I insist upon the name as I insist upon the thing. It is not very clear from what suggestions our forefathers in post-colonial days, developed the thing, and it is not clear at all how they came to adopt for it an Italian name, changing the significance as well as the sound.

In the South they have always said "gallery," and here at the North "porch" now appears to be displacing "piazza." But these are rightly the names of other things, and while there can, of course, be no objection to the orthodox English "veranda," it seems a pity to abandon a distinctively American name for a distinctively American kind of veranda. —Mrs. Schuyler Van Rensselaer in Scribner's Magazine.

Silver Fox Hard to Catch.

On Mount Whitney and its white crested neighbors of the stupendous Sierra Nevada, within sight of burning Death valley, and at the portals of semitropic southern California, says the Philadelphia Record, trappers and sportsmen are gradually discovering that wild life teems in variety and numbers as in few if any other regions of similar proportions on the globe. The rarest of its treasures for milady is the silver fox. Of these there have been captured half a dozen worth from $500 to $1,000 each, and many of smaller value. The silver fox's coat is coal black, with a luster of burnished white metal, and a white tip to the tail. Apparently it is quite abundant in the place referred to, but extremely difficult to catch.

ARABIAN EMPIRE NOT LIKELY

As Travelers Point Out, System and Organization Are Foreign to the Semitic Mind.

"History is against the probability of the creation of an Arabian empire. The Semitic mind does not lean toward system or organization," said Col. Thomas E. Lawrence recently.

"The Semites are represented by very little art, architecture, philosophy. But we find an amazing fertility among the Semites in the creation of creeds and religions. Three of these creeds—Judaism, Christianity and Mohammedanism—have become great world movements. The broken fragments of countless other religions which have failed are found today on the fringes of the desert.

"The desert seems to produce only one idea—the universality of God. We, who have gone out to discover the meaning of the desert have found only emptiness—nothing but sand, wind, soft and empty space. The Bedouins leave behind them every extraneous comfort and go to live in the desert, in the very arms of starvation, that they may be free. The desert exacts a price for its secret. It makes the Bedouins entirely useless to their fellow men. There has never been a Bedouin prophet. On the other hand, there has never been a Semitic prophet who has not, before preaching his message, gone into the desert and caught from the desert dwellers a reflection of their belief. The idea of the absolute worthlessness of the present world is a pure desert conception, at the root of every Semitic religion, which must be filtered through the sceen of a non-nomad prophet before it can be accepted by a settled people.—Asia Magazine.

ANIMAL LIFE AT ITS WORST

Woe-Begone Specimens of Dogs, Pigs, and Horses in the Cuban Province of Pinar del Rio.

There are more dogs than any other kind of animal life in Pinar del Rio, the westernmost province of Cuba, and chickens, pigs, ponies and goats rank next in the order named. Dogs may be seen everywhere, but they are lazy and indifferent. Each shack-hold has a few chickens, none of which would have the shade of a chance in a poultry show, but might hold their own at a cocking main.

There are many pigs to be seen, but they are so thin and weakened that the much-abused razor-back looks like a prosperous porker, says the National Geographical Magazine. Each pig is anchored fast to a peg in the ground, tethered to a rope. Knowing that if the rope were passed only about the pig's neck he could wiggle free, the native passes it around the pig in the front of one shoulder and behind the opposite leg, and then draws it tight enough to prevent the pig from backing out of it or creeping through.

The horses one sees are between the Texas and the Shetland pony in size, and so thin that one wonders if they can make a shadow. Milch goats, which are the cows of Pinar del Rio, seem to be the one class of animal able to look fat and sleek.

New Rigid Airship Is Speedy.

In the latest rigid airship, R-80 as developed by the Vickers people, particular attention was given to the elimination of unnecessary head resistance and the cutting down of weight, and the builders have produced in R-80 a ship of only 1¼ million cubic feet capacity, whose performance in speed and endurance is equal to that of R-33 and R-34, which have a capacity of two million cubic feet. The overall length of R-80 is 700 feet, its diameter is 70 feet and its height 87 feet. The total gross lift is 78.5 tons at sea level, and the disposable lift is 17.5 tons. At full power the estimated speed is over sixty miles per hour and the cruising radius at this speed is four thousand miles and sixty-five hundred miles at fifty miles an hour.—Scientific American.

Artificial Milk on Board Ship.

The milk problem on the hospital ships of the United States navy is solved in a different and highly ingenious fashion. On board the Mercury and Comfort there is now a machine which manufactures milk in any desired quantity, although the ship may have been at sea for weeks. The "mechanical cow" needs to be fed with a combination of unsalted butter and skimmed milk powder, and it will give milk with any degree of butter fat which is required. It also produces cream that will whip and the fluid which it yields tastes like the best quality of dairy milk and cream that can be procured ashore.

Eruptions on the Sun.

Not long ago at the Yerkes observatory, an eruption was observed (and photographed) on the rim of the sun which threw up material to a height of 500,000 miles. One cloud of it which appeared as if floating detached, was reckoned to have some thousands of times the volume of the earth. We are accustomed to regard great volcanic explosions on the earth as the most appalling of natural phenomena, but they are feeble and trifling disturbances compared with the outbursts which are continually taking place all over the body of the sun.

DESERT HERO KNOWN TO FEW

Dog That, With Its Master, Was Savior of Many Lives, Well Cared For in Its Old Age.

Rufus, the dog hero of the desert, who has saved many lives, is ending his declining days in a dog sanatorium at Pasadena, Cal., where he is well cared for. The end of the dog is not far off, says Our Dumb Animals in a recent issue. He is spent and feeble after his many long and weary journeys over the burning and blinding sands with his pioneer master. He will no doubt soon fall asleep.

Lou Westcott Beck and Rufus were intrepid pioneers in a life-saving project that received scanty support and tardy recognition. Together they fared forth on their mission of mercy, Beck carrying signboards and cans of paint, Rufus laden with saddlebags of restoratives and poison antidote. While the man set up the guideposts, or painted the water signs, the dog succored many a prospector who otherwise would have died miserably from delirium of thirst or the venom of snake bites.

The work of these two great benefactors is over. Beck died in July, 1917, and since then the government has appropriated one hundred thousand dollars to carry on the project that he and his devoted dog started.

Rufus will be well provided for by a veterinarian who was a personal friend of Beck's. The old dog's years of hardships, of life-saving service on the desolate wastes, are not without their reward. His many friends who used to see him on the streets and pat him with approval as he started out on his desert trips will not forget him in his old age.

ENCOURAGE BIRDS TO NEST

Only Through Them Can the Many Insect Pests Be Kept Within the Bounds of Safety.

Of all the ways of ridding our gardens, parks and farms of the insect pests that destroy fruit, grain, and even trees, none is so effective as the encouragement of birds. Most birds are naturally insect eaters, and it is really amazing to count the number of beetles, bugs, caterpillars and grubs that a small bird will devour in a day.

Andre Godard, a French naturalist, remarks in a recent number of La Nature (Paris) that agricultural plagues invariably follow the disappearance of birds, and he notes that the forests of Hungary were saved by the placing of many artificial nests to attract the feathered enemies of the grubs that were destroying the trees.

It is true that a few birds eat fruit and grain, but even these prefer insects, and it is probably true in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred that the bird which seems to be eating the fruit is really pecking at an insect inside it.

Many Film Pictures Per Second.

Taking motion pictures at the rate of some 15,000 a second with a camera and lens, is the recent achievement of a French scientist. High-speed photography is not new, but heretofore has depended upon electric-spark shadows without lenses and lacking sufficient illumination for clear definition. The mechanism of the camera consists of an aluminum reel, electrically driven at 3,600 r. p. m. and winding film at 164 feet a second. At this rate pictures 2 inches high are made about 10,000 times a second, larger and smaller surfaces being exposed at respectively slower and faster speeds, says the August Popular Mechanics Magazine in an article carrying a full-page illustration.

The illuminant is a stream of high-tension electric sparks with a frequency of about 80,000 a second, produced at the focal point of a concave reflector, and kept from flaming by a current of air.

Nippon Honors Her Soldiers.

On a hill near Port Arthur, China, there looms a grand memorial tower, and just back of it are buried, in unmarked trenches, the bodies of 22,000 of the bravest soldiers of Nippon, says the Detroit Free Press. It is a shrine for every loyal Japanese. On the side of another hill lie buried all that is mortal of 15,000 Russians, and there also a monument has been reared. These were the men who died during the siege of Port Arthur, which commenced 15 years ago and continued for almost a year. Although Port Arthur was given back to China by the Japanese it remains for all practical purposes a stronghold of Nippon, and it is today more Japanese in character than Chinese, and is likely to remain so unless Japan is forced to relinquish the city by another war.

William Jason Knew.

William Jason Tucker, four-year-old son of Dr. and Mrs. E. T. Tucker of Columbus, was out riding with his parents and sister Sunday night, and an unusually large number of fireflies were seen along the country roads. His sister, age six, asked what caused the light in the fireflies. While her mother was trying to explain, William Jason remarked scornfully: "Why, Emily Margaret, anybody ought to know that. It's because they have headlights in their stomachs."—Indianapolis News.

DELINQUENT DOG TAX WILL BE COLLECTED

Dog owners in Pennsylvania who violate the law by failing to take out a license for their dogs, and who escape punishment during any one year, may be held for the license fee, even though action is not instituted until the following year. The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture is assisting the local county officials and constables in enforcing the law, and while hundreds of prosecutions have been instituted in various sections, and while this work will be vigorously prosecuted throughout the year, yet there will be some dog owners who will escape detection.

Those dog owners, however, will be liable to prosecution next year for failure to comply with the law this year. Some counties are now planning to collect the delinquent taxes for 1919 and this work will be prosecuted with vigor.

Thus far in 1920 there have been 1,421 prosecutions entered in the state for violation of the dog law, and each case has been successfully terminated. This is as against 107 prosecutions in 1919.

The activity of the enforcement officials which have been centered on Washington county for the past several weeks will be extended to Greene Indiana and Armstrong counties within the next week or two, and a large number of arrests will be ordered in each of these counties.

An impression has gone throughout the state that the offenders are largely confined to the rural sections of the state. This is incorrect as offenders have been found in cities and towns as well as in the country sections.

LADY MACCABEES GIVE A SURPRISE PARTY

The Lady Macabees held a surprise party on Mrs. Victor Alexander, on Thursday evening, at her home 314 Oakland avenue. Thirty ladies were present and the evening was spent in games and music. The visitors presented Mrs. Alexander with a string of beautiful jet beads. A very dainty lunch was served by Ladies Schwerer and Begge.

AIRPLANE CARRIED MINE PAY ROLL

An unusual experiment in the way of carrying the payroll to workmen was successfully tried at Franklin, Pa., on Thursday, when $14,000 made up in pay envelopes was transported by air plane from that city to the mines of William J. James. The pilot of the machine was accompanied by a heavily armed mechanic. The distance between Franklin and the mines is 50 miles.

PREPARING FOR NEW PASSENGER SCHEDULES

New passenger train schedules will become effective September 26. Numerous meetings are being held in connection with preparing these schedules, there being one at Altoona on Wednesday, which was attended by A. J. Schauer of Uniontown, assistant trainmaster of the Monongahela Division of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

Mr. Cummins, former chairman of the Democratic National Committee acknowledges that the response to appeals for financial assistance was not answered in a very encouraging way by the people of this country. Maybe that is why Mr. Cox is raising such a hullabaloo about the financial end of the campaign.

The notion that man may be made virtuous by legislation is as groundless as the notion that man may get into heaven through a mere faith-ticket of admission without genuine moral reform.

WILL THAT ALARMED WORLD

Eccentric Frenchman Planned to Build Up Large Estate, But in the End Signally Failed.

Mingled wonder, indignation and alarm were excited in the public mind over a will left by Peter Thelusson, a Frenchman, who died on July 21, 1797. It appears that the testator had accumulated a large fortune as a London merchant, and by the provisions of his will he left to his wife and children the sum of £100,000, and the residue of his property, amounting to about £600,000, he committed to trustees, to accumulate during the lives of his sons, and finally to revert to his eldest great-grandson. Should no heir exist, the accumulated property was to be conveyed to the sinking fund for the reduction of the national debt. According to the lowest calculation it was estimated that the fortune would amount to £19,000,000. The will was generally stigmatized as absurd and illegal, and the family tested it in court, where it was sustained, as it was likewise in the house of lords. In 1800 an act was passed making null all bequests for the purpose of accumulation for longer than twenty years after the testator's death. The last grandson died in 1856, and a dispute arose as to whether the eldest son's grandson should inherit or the eldest great grandson. It was decided in favor of the former. By reason of litigation and accidents of management the fortune inherited was little more than the original 600,000.

FISH HAS TWO UGLY WEAPONS

Giant Ray Said to Use Mouth Like a Shark and Is Provided With Dangerous Tail.

A so-called devilfish that is common on American coasts from 30 degrees north latitude to about the same degrees south of the line, is the giant ray. This fish looks very like a skate, but grows to an enormous size. It lies on the sea bottom, covering square yards of coral sand, and if attacked may prove not only nasty, but most dangerous. It is said to use its mouth like a shark, but its most unpleasant weapon is the toothed spear in its tail. Fishermen say it is able to drive this jagged lance through a man's thigh. Such a wound is extremely dangerous and almost invariably proves fatal. In the southern part of the Gulf of Mexico specimens of the giant ray have been killed up to 18 feet across. The fish has two horns, one on each side of its eyes, the latter being green, hideous and cruel beyond expression. A curious habit of this fish is to break water like a whale, falling with a tremendous splash that is heard for a long distance.

Boy and a Sermon.

The way of a boy with a sermon is this:

Composes himself with a deep sigh; listens attentively for three minutes, in unimpeachable form. Cautiously reaches hymn book from rack; drops it; recovers it; reads hymns for five minutes. Explores trousers pocket and examines with deep interest one magnet, two nails, three pencil stubs and several bits of unclassified junk. Drops something and hunts under seat until discovered. Sighs heavily; inspects all the stained glass windows and the ecclesiastical architecture and decorations. Puts sole of left foot against back of pew in front, at level of knee, and is highly surprised when foot drops noisily. Repeats same exercise with right foot with the same result. Sits still and gratefully sucks peppermint offered by merciful aunt. Sighs heavily. Experiments to see what will happen if he presses on his Adam's apple while head is extended forward; strange choking sound ensues, immediately suppressed by domestic authorities.—Life.

He Had the General Idea.

Rousy Johnson had never attained to any "book larnin'," but managed to absorb considerable of the general idea during one winter when the district school teachers boarded with him. During the winter the teacher often corrected the Johnson children in their grammar, and Rousy was proud of his offsprings' education.

After the teacher left Rousy elected to keep up the good work. At the supper table one evening he asked Ted, the nine-year-old boy, a question, and received the answer: "Uh-huh." Rousy judged this was a grammatical error. "What do you mean by answering me that-a way?" he demanded. "Uh-huh ain't no word. If you mean yep, say yep, and don't grunt like a pig."

In 1911 the city of Paris bought the old residence of the archbishops of Sens in the Saint Paul quarter with no particular thought as to what use would be made of it. The idea has now gained favor of converting it into a Saint Joan of Arc museum. The building was built between 1474 and 1519, and is uncommonly rich in French memories. Queen Margot lived in it for a while, and it is inseparably connected with Charles VIII and the Hundred Years war. It is regarded as one of the very best specimens of Parisian architecture of the fifteenth century.

ACCORDING TO FIXED DESIGN

All pantomime clowns paint their cheeks and mostly they do so according to certain designs handed down from generation to generation. But as to the why and the wherefore opinions differ.

According to one authority the scarlet triangles, red fishtail and half moon, originated from dabs of vermillion placed here and there on the cheeks at haphazard to represent a naughty boy who had been at the jam pot.

Another says that the pantomime clown's reddened face is intended as a burlesque of the rouge-tinted cheeks of the pantomime Columbine; while yet a third has it that the crimson patches are a survival from the early mystery plays, when the clown was a demon, and red all over.

The theory has also been held that the modern clown in pantomime is a direct descendant of Momus, the god of mockery of the early mystery plays and masques, who was always represented with a huge gaping mouth. The red fishtail is merely the survival of that part of the medieval makeup which aimed at producing an apparent enlargement of the mouth.

These curious scarlet symbols are only found on the cheeks of pantomime clowns. The ordinary circus clown does not paint his cheeks.

He paints only his nose, with a view to poking fun at the "boss," the ringmaster, whose nasal organ, in regard to the old-time circuses at all events, was more often than not apt to be highly colored.—Pearson's Weekly.

PUT THEIR WITS TO WORK

A curiously addressed letter passed through the post office at Madrid, which was deciphered and correctly delivered, notwithstanding all difficulties, says the Philadelphia Inquirer.

The address was a perfect rebus. At the left hand side was the figure of a lady; it was clear, therefore, to which sex the recipient should belong. Over the lady's head the sun was rising; hence her name was inferred to be Aurora. For her surname stood a hill, with a castle at its foot, which gives us "Montes y Castello."

Next comes the town, for which the plan of a city was drawn, on which the Alhambra was legible. This indicated Granada; but in order to leave no doubt possible, a pomegranate was drawn beside the plan. To complete the address a number was indicated in one of the streets of the city plan.

The postal authorities took three days to study this curiosity and then triumphantly delivered the letter to "Senorita Aurora Montes y Castello, Azacayas, No. 20, Granada," and so far from censuring the sender, they had the envelope photographed and a copy printed in the Madrid newspapers, as a proof of the intelligence of the department.

It is a pleasing sight, of a Sunday morning, when the bell is sending its sober melody across the quiet fields, to behold the peasantry in their best finery, with ruddy faces, and modest cheerfulness, thronging tranquilly along the green lanes to church; but it is still more pleasing to see them in the evenings, gathering about their cottage doors, and appearing to exult in the humble comforts and embellishments which their own hands have spread around them.—Washington Irving.

COULDN'T WAIT FOR MARTIN

Negro Preacher Had Premonition That Unpleasantness Might Follow His Appearance.

A negro preacher lost his way one night and sought shelter. He was told that the only place available was a haunted house down the road. The preacher had his Bible with him; he went to the haunted house, built a fire in the big room and sat down to read the good book. Suddenly a small black cat brushed past him.

"Isn't it nice," thought the old man, "that there is life to keep me company here in this gloomy place?"

The cat walked over to the fireplace, ate a live coal and spat out the sparks.

The old man opened the Bible and began to read aloud. Before he could go further another cat entered the room, a cat almost as big as a collie, and this cat walked over to the fireplace and ate two live coals and spat out the sparks.

"When are we gwine to begin?" said the little cat.

Again the old preacher sought consolation in the Bible, but a third cat entered the room. This one was about as big as a pony, and it ate three live coals and spat out the sparks.

"When are we gwine to begin?" said the little cat, and this time the biggest one answered:

"We can't do nothing till Martin comes."

The old man jumped up, put his Bible in his back pocket and ran for the door. But before he went out he said to the biggest cat: "When Martin comes, you tell him I was here, but I could not remain."—Journal of the American Medical Association.

SYSTEM IN REGULAR SAVING

Money Should Be Made Easy to Deposit and Then Comparatively Hard to Withdraw.

"The only way for a man regularly to save money, unless he be one of those individuals possessed of an extraordinarily unrelenting character," according to Samuel Crowther, writing in System, the Magazine of Business, "is for the money to be passed into the savings account before it reaches him—that is, to put him in the position, once he has made his resolution, of having to make another resolution to quit saving in order to stop the process.

"Finally, take the convenience of withdrawal. A man will rightly hesitate about going into any system of saving which locks up his funds for any long period of time. The average worker has no great margin between income and outgo and he has to be prepared for a rainy day—for a birth, for a death, for a long illness. He cannot afford to put a measurable part of his funds out of reach. If his money is to go from him for a long time he very naturally will not deed away anything like so much as he would if the money were always available. On the other hand any system of saving in which withdrawals may be easily and secretly made is faulty. The funds should be available upon short notice, there should be a penalty for withdrawal, which penalty should be large enough to stop withdrawals for frivolous purposes and yet not so large as to work anything which savors of injustice on a man who honestly needs the money."

Happy Thought.

Mr. Thinboarder—"I wonder that you never serve individual pies." Mrs. Borden-Lodge—"You like them better?" Mr. Thinboarder—"No, but I was thinking that these indestructible crusts of yours could be cast in individual molds and then refilled any number of times."

"TREASURE ISLAND" AT COYLE THEATRE

Robert Louis Stevenson's immortal story, "Treasure Island," has reached the screen. Maurice Tourneur produced it for Paramount Arteraft release and it will be shown at the Coyle theatre on Monday and Tuesday next, September 13 and 14. All the color and spirit of high adventure that is in the Stevenson classics has been retained and the photoplay has been mounted with Mr. Tourneur's mastery of artistic production. The story has been followed closely in the screen version. Jim Hawkins, Bill Bones, Long Silver, Ben Gunn—all the familiar characters appear in the life of the picture. The picture opens in "Benbow Tavern," where at Bill Bones' death young Jim comes into possession of the chart showing the location of Captain Flint's treasure. From there sails the old brigantine in which the Squire and his mutinous crew leave on the treasure hunt. Battles with the pirates, the kidnapping of Jim the fight in the stockade, and the final success follow.

CHALLENGES DONORA TO BASE BALL GAMES

John G. McIlvaine, manager of the Charleroi Independents, has issued a challenge to the winners of the Donora Home League penant to a series of games to determine the championship of the valley. McIlvaine claims the title for the Charleroi team, but in order that there may bo no dispute as to the honor he suggests a series of three or five games with a representative team from Donora to definitely settle the question. The latter is now with the management of the Home League in Donora and it is not improbable that a series be arranged for, with games played in both towns.

INFLUENZA EPIDEMIC UNLIKELY THIS FALL

There have been no indications of a return of last year's influenza epidemic this coming winter, the Public Health Service announced from Washington on Thursday. Each year, it was said, between November and May, a number of cases are reported, but experts of the service do not expect the disease to be as widespread or as virulent this year as in 1919.

STRIKE OIL ON FINLEY FARM NEAR WEBSTER

A good paying oil well was struck yesterday on the J. Z. Finley farm, located near Webster below Monessen. The well is owned by the Monessen Oil & Gas Co.

During the second McKinley campaign when a disgruntled Democrat read the returns, he said, "B'gosh, they've bought us ag'in" Cox seems to fear that the same thing may happen in his campaign.
